Opposition Leader Questions Need for Ottawa Office April 1, 2009

The provincial government's representative in Ottawa garnered some attention in the legislature. Opposition Leader Yvonne Jones wonders with the current state of affairs between the province and the federal government, if it necessary for this province to have an office in Ottawa. Dr. John Fitzgerald was named as Newfoundland and Labrador's liaison in the nation's capital a few years back. Williams says Fitzgerald's office is important in getting our issues on the radar, and he is doing a very good job.
