Injured Worker Dilemma Hits House of Assembly May 6, 2009

The Opposition wants to know what government is doing to expedite claims for injured workers in need of renovations and accommodations. Opposition Leader Yvonne Jones says the case of Shirley Ryan was brought to light last week. Ryan recently had surgery to remove her leg below the knee and returned home after surgery to find the Workplace Health, Safety and Compensation Commission had made no accommodations to the house to allow her safe access. The Minister Responsible for Persons with Disabilities, Susan Sullivan, says through the new client services office opened last year, they have been endeavoring to respond to all calls within 24 hours and all other correspondence within 10 business days. Sullivan says they are reviewing their procedures.
