Opposition Questions Department's Communications April 23, 2008

The Opposition is raising concerns about communications protocols within the Department of Environment. Environment Critic Roland Butler says earlier this year, it took almost a week for residents in a number of communities around the province to learn their drinking water had been treated with contaminated chlorine. Butler says municipal workers in New Brunswick first noticed the problem and alerted officials with Health Canada as early as January 25th. Butler questioned Minister Charlene Johnson in the House of Assembly.
