Opposition Questions Justice Minister May 13, 2008

Opposition House Leader Kelvin Parsons says the Province's Minister of Justice has done an about-face. Jerome Kennedy represented Gregory Parsons at the Lamer Inquiry into the province's wrongful convictions, which spanned 3 years and cost 7 million dollars. In the House of Assembly, Parsons questioned whether Kennedy, as the Attorney General, should be making public statements undermining the Cameron Inquiry while it's underway. Parsons says during the Lamer Inquiry, Kennedy didn't have a problem with intense questions to get to the root of the issue.
