Opposition Seeks Answers on Legislature Reopening November 14, 2008

The Opposition wants to know when the legislature is going to be open for the fall sitting. Liberal House Leader Kelvin Parsons says most legislatures across Canada are already open and debating legislation. He says there is a trend developing in this province that the current government will wait until the absolute last minute to open the legislature, then rush towards closure in the shortest time possible. Parsons says the people of the province deserve their legislature opened and the issues debated. He also noted that the Opposition has been given no indication as to what legislation will be presented and no time lines to allow detailed and proper preparation for debate.
